Poem – “Childhood”

We will never be that little again,
Those little kids have slept away,
Our little selves now live in memories,
That little us is gone with yesterday.

We were curled in Father's arms, free from pain,
The world felt easy, his love made us feel safe,
In his arms, we found our quiet place,
His unconditional love, our childhood peace.

We have to grow, to find our way,
But part of our heart wants to stay,
Back to the time with tiny feet,
Of bedtime stories and the peaceful sleeps,
So close to love, so free from fear

We have grown, and the time will never come again,
But life moves on, and we pretend we're fine
Still aching for those days called ‘MINE’,
And holding on our little world, childhood echoes

STUDENT CORNER

Serving as the Shraddha House Captain has been an unforgettable journey, shaped by the school's unwavering spirit of unity, determination, and excellence. This role has allowed me to dedicate myself wholeheartedly to the progress of my House, while constantly striving to uphold its values and traditions. The vibrant environment has not only strengthened my sense of perseverance and discipline but has also taught me the true meaning of collective effort and resilience. Every challenge faced and every goal achieved has become a step toward my personal and academic growth. I extend my heartfelt gratitude to the teachers and mentors for their endless encouragement and guidance, which has been the foundation of my journey.

~Shiv Kakkar, Shraddha House Captain

Serving as the Saburi House Captain has been a rewarding experience, strengthened by the school's emphasis on discipline, teamwork, and leadership. This role has given me the opportunity to guide my house members, learn responsibility, and foster unity. I am grateful to my teachers and peers for their trust and support, and I remain committed to carrying out my duties with sincerity and dedication.

~Pratham Maggo, Saburi House Captain
